Challenging and Accurate

By Russell Almand

This book is amazing! The arrangements sound very similar to the ones that you hear them play with a few exceptions because of it being written for one cello and one piano and sometimes they use more than one cello. But, the piano part makes up for it so the sound is very similar. I would not say that the cello part is optional if you want the true sound. If you don't have anyone who plays cello, you could always use a keyboard with string sounds for that part.

The arrangements themselves are difficult. I have played piano for 14 years and have done some very difficult pieces throughout many genres. These are definitely doable for an advanced pianist, but they still take some work. Some you might pick up right away while others will definitely take some practice.

My friend who is a cellist says that the cello part is definitely for an advanced cellist. It is well arranged and very enjoyable to try but they are definitely hard.

I am looking forward to hopefully get some polished and try getting them down pat. I would buy this again in a heartbeat.

Great Book if You Play Piano and Your Friend Plays Cello

By Chad Hensley

Well written music, but pretty much requires a cellist to complete the sound. I bought this for my wife for her birthday because she loves listening to the Piano Guys so much. I was hopeful with it being listed in the piano section that the cello part would not be required. Unfortunately, I was wrong and we ended up returning it. Don't get me wrong, there are a few songs that do not require a cello, but not enough to make the purchase worth while. If you are a piano player and have a friend who plays the cello, I highly suggest this book! The only other complaint I have is the binding they insist on using for these books. We often times take our music books to Office Max and have them cut of the spine and coil bind the books for us.

We love The Piano Guys!

By Diane

I bought this for my son who plays the cello and loves most of The Piano Guys music. He really enjoys getting to play their music.
